Subject RE: AOR re Rep. Kay Granger

Thank you. I have one clarification. While I am not certain that costs paid by the campaign in connection with the book will be "substantial," I am certain that they will not be "de minimis." Perhaps it would be more accurate to state that the contemplated costs will not be "de minimis."

Dear Mr. Baran:

This e-mail will confirm our conversation earlier today. As a result of our conversation and your message, we understand that:

--the subtitle of Rep. Granger's book will be "Celebrating Our Nation's Values," instead of "Teaching America's Values to America's Children;"

--both the Committee website and the e-mails sent to the Committee mailing list will provide information about how to purchase a copy of the book and information about upcoming book-related events;

--the costs of the contemplated activity would be substantial, and not de minimis; and

--while Rep. Granger will not receive any royalties, she will declare income to the extent required and take an offsetting charitable contribution deduction to the extent permitted under tax law.

Please let me know if any of the statements above is incorrect.
